Whereas the oak tree looked e and stout. The tree was very much proud of his size and strength. He often ridiculed weak reeds. One day the oak tree boasted, "Look, how strong I am! I can resist the verful wind without bowing down before it. But you reeds are so week that you can not n sustain the soft breeze and start trembling with fear.
	The tree continued with his boastful talk, "I am so strong that I can block the way of the wind, whereas you weak vegetations bow down even before the gentle blow of the wind. After hearing enough from the oak tree, the reeds said humbly," Of course we are weak ir front of the strong wind and so we pay our respect to the wind by bowing down in front of it. I think that you should also sometimes bow down in front of the powerful wind."
	The arrogant tree laughed aloud, "Ha, Ha! I am not a reed who bows down to all everyone. I'm a stout oak tree who never bends." The wind which had been hearing tree's arrogant talk since long, couldn't tolerate it anymore. It blew so hard that the tal sturdy oak tree was uprooted and thrown on the ground. However, the weak and sle reeds survived because they bowed to save themselves from the strong wind blow. It s that how humility always wins.						he nd ler
